From:	Ehud Barak <ehbarak1@gmail.com>
To:	karl.vick@time.com
CC:
Date:	Mon, 4/13/2015 10:28:16 PM
Subject:	Re: edited text - EB 3rd response

Karl
In 2nd thought better have ".., even an attack-if needed. "
That insinuate that it's not the preferred course of action but we shouldn't be deterred from considering or executing it-IF NEEDED.
Best
EB

Sent from my iPhone

On Apr 13, 2015, at 20:46, Ehud Barak <ehbarak1@gmail.com> wrote:

> Hi Karl
> It's basically very good. But I still think it's important to point to the fact that a kinetic attack should NOT be excluded.
> So I can just put in > ".., an attack-if needed."
> It'll turn clear what I mean.
> Pl confirm
> Best
> EB
>
> Sent from my iPhone
>
> On Apr 13, 2015, at 17:55, <karl.vick@time.com> <karl.vick@time.com> wrote:
>
> > General, I have just now:
> >
> > Substituted "trivial" for the extra "easy"
> >
> > "tougher" for "better"
> >
> > And added "terror" and "Iranian" in the final graph.
> >
> > But I am going to try to talk you out of "action — if needed." I gather you mean to qualify the notion of a military strike. But it's clear the action you are calling for is mobilizing the region's moderates. So the addition would confuse, I believe.
> >
> > Below is how it reads with all the changes but this last one. I think it works:
> >
> > I knew Bibi, decades ago, as a soldier and young officer under my command facing real fire. He was determined, effective and focused. Character does not change. Chickenshit he is not. But over time, while thoughtful and an avid reader of history, he developed a mind-set at once pessimistic, passive and anxious. Netanyahu seems to avoid any initiative. Some say it's all about surviving in power. I think he is more complex and nuanced.

Netanyahu was just elected, for the fourth time, to lead Israel. I personally know it's not trivial to win office, simple to govern or easy to leave a positive imprint on history. Netanyahu is basically right about Iran and our risky neighborhood. But he can fail to seize opportunities, and on the Palestinian question he grossly ignores the slippery slope awaiting Israel in the form of a "one-state solution."

To leave his mark Netanyahu must swiftly heal wounds opened by his campaign, mend the working relationship with President Obama, fight hard—mainly behind closed doors—for a tougher policy against Iran and boldly engage the region's moderates against terror, radicalism and Iranian hegemony. Daring actions are needed. Not just words.

From: Ehud Barak <ehbarak1@gmail.com>
Date: Sunday, April 12, 2015 9:35 AM
To: "Vick, Karl - Time U.S. <karl.vick@time.com>" <karl.vick@time.com>
Subject: Fwd: edited text - EB 3rd response

Hi Karl
Last correction I assume.I added

to the last paragraph (Iran)
" , action-if needed,"
Pl add it to the final text.
Best
EB

Sent from my iPhone

Begin forwarded message:

From: ehbarak <ehbarak1@gmail.com>
Date: April 11, 2015 at 23:28:21 GMT+3
To: Vick Karl <karl.vick@time.com>
Subject: Fwd: edited text - EB 2nd response

Hi Karl
a) I've changed one word. In the last paragraph I put "tougher " rather than "better" policy against Iran.
b) I have a small security detail usually one US(NYPD or Secret Service) and one IL will enter but they know how to coordinate it. They usually don't take seats and do not disturb.
Expect your final final on Monday.
Best
EB

TEXT:

I knew Bibi, decades ago, as a soldier and young officer under my command facing real fire. He was determined, effective and focused. Character does not change. Chicken shit he is not. But over time, while thoughtful and an avid reader of history, he developed a mindset at once pessimistic, passive and anxious. Netanyahu seems to avoid any initiative. Some say it's all about surviving in power. I think he is more complex and nuanced.

Netanyahu was just elected, for the fourth time, to lead Israel. I personally know it's not trivial to be elected, simple to govern or easy to leave a positive imprint on history. Netanyahu is basically right about Iran and our risky neighborhood. But he can fail to seize opportunities, and on the Palestinian question grossly ignores the slippery slope awaiting Israel in the form of a "one-state solution."

To leave his mark Netanyahu must swiftly heal wounds opened by his campaign; mend the working relationship with President Obama; fight hard—mainly behind closed doors—for a tougher policy, action if needed, against Iran; and boldly engage the region's moderates against radicalism,terror and Iranian hegemony. Daring actions are needed. Not just words.

Please be alert for any emails that may ask you for login information or directs you to login via a link. If you believe this message is a phish or aren't sure whether this message is trustworthy, please send the original message as an attachment to 'phishing@timeinc.com'.